Free Downloadable Guide

5-Minute Dream Persistence Practice: A Gentle Way to Keep Going

Your dream is not a race—it's a journey

Introduction

Starting something new often feels exciting at first—but fear, doubt, or the weight of expectations can quickly turn that excitement into pressure. We imagine the big picture and wonder why we're not there yet. We wait for approval that never comes. We forget that every great achievement begins with small, steady steps.

This gentle 5-minute printable practice is for the moments when you feel like giving up too soon—when your dream feels too far away, or when the pressure to succeed is draining your energy.

Use it whenever you find yourself thinking:

- "I'm failing because I'm not there yet."
- "I don't know if I have what it takes."
- "Maybe I should just quit."

All you need is a few quiet minutes and the willingness to remind yourself: you are on your way.

Step 1: Shift Inward (1 minute)

- Close your eyes and take 3 deep breaths.
- Say to yourself: "I am building this for me, not for approval."
- Remind yourself that your motivation comes from within—not from likes, recognition, or someone else's validation.

Step 2: Take One Small Step (2 minutes)

Think of your big dream. Then, answer these prompts in writing or mentally:

- What is one small step I can take today toward this goal?
- What could I try if that doesn't work?
- How can I prepare myself gently instead of pressuring myself to be at the finish line?

Step 3: Release the Pressure (2 minutes)

Choose one of the following phrases and repeat it gently to yourself:

- "I am allowed to grow at my own rhythm."
- "Small steps are still progress."
- "Pressure does not define me—patience does."
- "I don't need to rush. My dream is unfolding."

Repeat your phrase until you feel lighter and more grounded.

© Andressa Martins Psychotherapy
This resource is for personal use only and may not be copied, distributed, or sold without permission.
For more tools, reflections, and support, visit www.andressamartinspsychotherapy.com

Step 4: See Your Current Job as a Path (1 minute)

If you are working while building your dream, remind yourself:

- Your current job is a step on your path, not the end goal.
- Ask: "How can I use what I do now to prepare for my dream?"
- Keep your energy balanced—progress slowly, reduce hours if possible, but stay consistent in both paths.

Step 5: Celebrate Small Wins (1 minute)

- Take a moment to acknowledge any progress, no matter how small.
- Say to yourself: "Every step I take brings me closer to my dream."
- Keep a small journal or list of your wins to remind yourself that growth is happening, even when it feels invisible.

Final Reflection

"What changes when I stop pressuring myself and trust the process?"

Support & Next Steps

I'm Here With You

Thank you for taking this step toward deeper self-awareness, emotional clarity, and self-worth.

If this guide brought up insights, emotions, or new questions, you don't have to hold them alone. You're always welcome to share your reflections with me:
👉 Write me an E-mail

If this reflection opened something deeper, you may wish to explore working with me through a one-on-one session or ongoing support. Learn more or book a session here:
👉 Therapy Options

If you'd like to keep learning and reflecting, you can also visit my blog, where I share psychological insights, personal reflections, and practical tools for emotional growth and healing:
👉 Read My Blog

And if this guide supported you in any way, you're welcome to support my work. Your support helps me continue creating accessible, thoughtful resources like this for others:
👉 Buy Me a Coffee

With warmth,
Andressa

© Andressa Martins Psychotherapy
This resource is for personal use only and may not be copied, distributed, or sold without permission.
For more tools, reflections, and support, visit www.andressamartinspsychotherapy.com